Seminar topic: Incident Response Unplugged: Stories, Strategies & Survival Tips

Cyber incidents are now no longer a question of “if” but “when”: when it happened and when it was finally discovered. The difference between disaster and minor disruption often comes down to how you respond. In this exclusive breakfast session Conan Bradley will share hard-won lessons from the frontlines of New Zealand’s cyber battles.

Drawing on real-world cases, Conan will reveal what organisations get right (or badly wrong) when facing ransomware, data breaches and emerging threats. You’ll hear practical strategies, learn common pitfalls, and discover what it takes to lead a calm, effective response when it matters most.

This session offers actionable insights and candid discussion to help you stay ahead of the curve. Bring your questions and join NZISF for an hour you won’t want to miss.

Presenter: Conan Bradley

Conan Bradley is the Incident Response and Digital Forensics Practice Lead for Kordia Cyber (formerly SecOps NZ), based in Auckland. With a wealth of experience in cyber security, Conan specialises in guiding organisations through the full lifecycle of incident response - from strategy, plans, playbooks, and rehearsals, all the way through to hands-on crisis management and post-incident recovery.

Conan leads Kordia Cyber's incident response team, supporting clients as they navigate everything from ransomware attacks to complex data breaches. He is highly regarded for his calm, strategic approach, and his ability to translate technical challenges into clear business priorities for Executives and Boards.

A regular speaker and panellist at industry events, Conan is always able to share practical, real-world insights drawn from recent high-profile incidents. He also contributes to industry publications with analyses of major ransomware cases and privacy breaches, and he remains passionate about helping organisations build resilient cyber security cultures.

Conan's expertise and approachable style make him a trusted voice in the information security community. We're delighted to welcome him to this NZISF session.
